

Abstract

5 The invention relates to a coated object in which coatings remain of a constant and unchanged high quality despite operating temperatures of more than 350°C. This is achieved with interlayers which deliberately interrupt and thereby stabilize the morphology of the coating.